EFFECT OF LISTING

1. Employee retains full and exclusive ownership of Employee's rights in the listed Prior Inventions. Haiven has no ownership claim to a listed Prior Invention.
2. The listed Prior Inventions include all versions existing before the Employment Commencement Date and Employee's rights in independently developed continuations, modifications, enhancements, updates, ports, bindings, derivative works, and documentation, but only to the extent they do not incorporate Company Inventions, Company Confidential Information, or work created within Employee's duties and are not otherwise assignable under applicable law. Continued maintenance or development during employment does not by itself transfer ownership to Haiven.
3. Listing, disclosure, evaluation, discussion, or permitted continuation of a Prior Invention does not itself grant Haiven an ownership interest or license.
4. If Employee incorporates a Prior Invention into a Haiven product, process, or machine with Haiven's prior written authorization, Haiven receives only the rights available under the Prior Invention's then-applicable published open-source license or under a separate written license signed by Employee and Haiven. No broader implied or automatic license arises from incorporation.
5. Nothing in this Exhibit A requires Employee to disclose source code, credentials, trade secrets, client information, or other material that Employee is not authorized to disclose.

INCORPORATION AND PRIORITY

This Exhibit A is incorporated into and forms part of the Agreement. If this Exhibit A conflicts with Section 3.4 or any other provision of the Agreement concerning the ownership, assignment, licensing, or permitted continuation of a listed Prior Invention, this Exhibit A controls.
